Herbert De Losinga

900 celebrations

This year the Cathedral is marking the 900th anniversary of the death of its founder, Bishop Herbert de Losinga.

We will mark the event by a series of lectures on his life and times - full details overleaf.

In addition, we are planning a series of special services from 18—23 July as they would have been celebrated by the monks of the Cathedral Priory in the Middle Ages - watch the website for further details:

Speakers:

Dr Dominic Aidan Bellenger is an ecclesiastical historian specialising in monastic studies and Anglo-French connections and the author of some twenty books. He was a Benedictine monk for many years and served his community, Downside Abbey, as abbot for eight years.

Professor Sandy Heslop was Slade Professor of Art at Cambridge University in 1997-8 and is currently President of the British Archaeological Association. He has published widely on art and architecture in England from c.1000 to the Reformation. His main project at present is the parish churches of medieval Norwich.

Professor Nicholas Vincent works for the most part on the history of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, mostly but not exclusively Anglo-French, with particular interests in charters, kingship, relics and the interface between political and intellectual history. He is presently engaged in a major project to publish the charters of the Plantagenet kings of England, from Henry II onwards.

Professor Catherine Cubitt is currently Head of the School of History at UEA and President of the Norfolk and Norwich Historical Association. She is currently finishing her second monograph, Sin and Society in Tenth- and Eleventh-Century England, and has published widely on the Anglo-Saxon church.

Professor Nigel Morgan's main research interests are late medieval English illuminated and liturgical manuscripts, with a special interest in Apocalypses and the iconography of devotional images. He also works on medieval stained glass and is preparing the Corpus Vitrearum Medii Aevi for the county of Kent.
